We are so familiar with the product and standards of this hospital, we are able to recite individual furniture product part numbers off the top of our heads. This project was completed remotely.

VA hospital clinical expansion

case study

We are currently part of the team to plan and select furnishings for a four-story expansion at the VA Hospital in Phoenix. Our team is working closely with the architect, VA designer, VA project manager, and future occupants to develop a space that:

- Reflects each department's needs
- Utilizes the building's furniture standards
- Complies with hospital regulations
- Fits within the project budget

With so many stakeholders (facilities, real estate, contracting, equipment planning, staff, and patients) involved in the process, attention to detail is critical. Input from every angle is recognized and part of a cohesive solution. We continually refer to the guiding principles and priorities established at the beginning of the project.

It's also a very large facility in constant flux so the VA is concerned about and focused on furniture and products that are movable, flexible, easily configured, durable, and adaptable.

Through a decade-long relationship with the service dealership, we are able to facilitate clear communication, thorough planning, and mutual technical respect, which eases the process significantly for the VA Hospital.
